Creating Confidence to CareSM

Convenient Approved Programs for a Confident Workforce

All too often, it's an accident, illness or disaster that demonstrates how important it is to prepare our employees for medical emergencies. In fact, emergencies strike with little warning, and you're either prepared ... or not. Every company needs to consistently reappraise its emergency preparedness:

- Would your employees respond in a medical emergency confidently and correctly?
- Does your company comply with CPR, first aid and AED (automated external defibrillator) training workplace regulatory standards?
- Are your employees up-to-date with the latest recommendations in CPR, first aid and AED use?

Emergency First Response can make sure you can answer these questions with "yes."

Emergency First Response Workplace Courses

The Emergency First Response First Aid at Work (Asia Pacific) programme is WorkCover NSW approved and includes CPR, AED and First Aid at Work training. We specialise in providing companies like yours with a complete, ongoing solution to maintaining emergency preparedness and meeting CPR and first aid training standards in the workplace. For your convenience, it is possible to arrange our instructors to come to your facility to train your staff. Alternatively you may find it more cost and schedule effective for us to train some of your employees as Emergency First Response Instructors. We can also assist you with placing AEDs in your facility and training your employees to use them.

Innovative Instruction Methods

Based on modern instructional system design, our courses offer delivery flexibility, including independent study options that optimise scheduling and make the best use of instructor-to-student contact time. Many companies find this provides the best learning results with the fewest schedule disruptions. Of course, Emergency First Response courses work perfectly if conventional classroom presentations work well for you.
